2 SECTION B: DESCRIPTION OF SERVICES/GOODS

Overview

This Scope of Work seeks companies in Poland with the capabilities to gather data systematically and carry out statistical analysis of the results. Capabilities sought include sampling, instrument design (based on research plan and objectives provided), administration of surveys, conduct of focus groups and individual interviews, and statistical analysis. The period for the performance is July - November 2017.

Background

The Research Group of the US Overseas Cooperative Development Council (OCDC) is currently embarking on a multi-year, multi-country cross-sector regional research study on the effects that cooperatives have on the social and economic well-being of individuals and the broader effects that they have in the communities where they are located. The focus will be on the primary society, but will also take into account second and third level bodies in all countries.

OCDC selected Poland as a pilot country in this effort. The Research Group desires a review of data over approximately a 20-year period. At the same time as the successful offeror is gathering and analyzing, it will also be testing and piloting instruments and other approaches for the larger multi-country study to be undertaken once the Poland pilot project is completed.

A separate but related activity that will be undertaken alongside this research effort is the gathering of information to understand any legacy effects of work carried out in Poland by OCDC members in the 1990's.

This Scope of Work addresses the design and implementation of the pilot research in Poland. There are two distinct tasks as described below. Offerors are expected to address both tasks. The important intent of this research is that the research be modest in scope yet nonetheless representative of the realities in Poland.

Definition of Terms:

For the purposes of this research project we define the following terms:

Community: The community is the larger environment in which the cooperatives are located. For this research, the community means non-cooperative members. This community is important because the principals of cooperatives state that a cooperative should be linked to and create impact in the community.

Cooperative: For the purposes of this research, a cooperative is an institution that upholds the international cooperative principles and holds legal status as a cooperative in Poland. In addition, the research is to focus on cooperatives that were established after 1998 within the context of a market based economy.

Methodology and Research Questions

The research study will include mixed methods to answer the following research questions:

1. How do cooperative members benefit economically from their cooperative membership and participation?

2. How do cooperative members benefit socially from their cooperative membership and participation?
3. How do communities benefit economically from the presence of cooperatives?
4. How do communities benefit socially from the presence of cooperatives?

The Research Group expects that the research team will develop a sampling plan and provide a sound methodology for selecting a representative sample of cooperatives and cooperative members and answering these research questions using quantitative and qualitative data.

Task 1: Quantitative survey of cooperative members and community members. Ideally this survey will be random and representative of Poland's cooperative members and will include a large enough sample to significantly show the effects of cooperative membership, as stated in the four research questions above.

Task 2: Qualitative key informant interviews and focus groups to more deeply answer the four research questions above. The Research Group expects that qualitative data will be collected from cooperative members, cooperative leaders, and community leaders.

Participants/Respondents:

A representative sample drawn according to the proposed sampling plan and research design of:

1. Cooperative Members
2. Cooperative Leaders (Board Members)
3. Community Leaders (non-cooperative members and cooperative members who play a significant role in the community)

The Research Group seeks to answer the preceding research questions using data from cooperative members, cooperative leaders, and community leaders through quantitative surveys, focus groups, and key informant interviews. The Offeror will assist the Research Group by identifying and reaching these groups. The Offeror will create a research methodology including a sampling plan to identify cooperatives, regions, and individuals to be included in the research to ensure that the results are representative.

Period of performance:

Work under this Scope of Work will start in July 2017 and end in November 2017. See below for timeline related to specific deliverables.

Proposal Requirements

1. The proposal should include a detailed proposal for the methodology of identifying and sampling cooperatives across sectors and regions to include providing a representative sample of cooperative members in Poland. It should also include a proposal of data collection method including but not limited to: plan for reaching participants, interview or survey type, mode of communication, and method of recording data. Note: OCDC's key concern is representativeness.
2. Prepare a sampling approach for selecting a representative group of business cooperatives in Poland.

The sampling plan is expected to be a clearly written document that contains precise details that the Offeror has used to determine the sample size, the locations from which the sample should be selected, and the method used to collect the sample. It should also stipulate the required documentation of procedures carried out during the sampling process. The initial plan included in the proposal should be capable of being reduced in size, while maintaining representativeness, to accommodate the resources. So, what is being sought is the minimum sample to obtain representative responses through responses to surveys to be analyzed statistically.

3. Design an implementation plan for the:
 - a. Task 1: representative survey of cooperative members and non-cooperative members
 - b. Task 2: focus groups of cooperative members, and key informant interviews with cooperative members, cooperative leaders, and community leaders based on the sampling plan.

The implementation plan should include target numbers necessary for significant, meaningful and generalizable findings and explanation of the rationale for the sampling as laid out in the sampling plan.

OCDC requires the research to produce generalizable findings and for this purpose, a representative sample is necessary. Nonetheless, to give an idea of the scope that is envisioned, OCDC illustratively proposes:

- i. Task 1: Random surveys of cooperative members and non-cooperative members
- ii. Task 2:
 1. Key informant interviews with cooperative members, cooperative leaders, and community leaders.
 2. Focus Groups: OCDC proposes focus groups with cooperative members to triangulate quantitative surveys.

The aim of the Research Group is to address its research questions in a concise fashion within the available financial resources and time frame. Thus, it will be important to select the right indicators for accuracy. It will also be important for reasons of cost and of clarity to limit the number of questions and indicators.

4. Describe the process and consideration for the design of proposed instruments for survey, key informant interviews, and focus groups including translations in English and Polish based on basic questionnaires and the four research questions provided by OCDC. OCDC welcomes proposals from responding companies but provides as guidance the following:
 - a. Multiple-choice surveys should result in qualitative data and ask multiple-choice questions about participant demographics, participation in the cooperative, and the social and economic effects of the cooperative.
 - b. Key informant interviews should last approximately 30 minutes and ask demographic information, ask multiple-choice questions about participant demographics, participation in the cooperative, and the social and economic effects of the cooperative, and ask for additional short answer qualitative responses.

- c. Focus Groups will be conducted where possible with cooperative members. The focus groups should triangulate information collected in the key informant interviews. The size of the groups and location of the focus groups will be reliant on willing cooperatives.
- 5. Approach to test for reliability and validate all the instruments on a small group of respondents and advise OCDC about the results; prepare a brief report to explain the rationale for any changes proposed to the instruments
- 6. Approach to Conduct surveys, key informant interviews, and focus groups observing an internationally recognized code of ethical research standards.
- 7. Approach and Considerations to Prepare data.
 - a. Task 1: OCDC expects that quantitative survey data will be presented in an organized and cleaned excel file. OCDC will have full access to the completed data set. No translation of raw data is expected. A key to the data set and multiple-choice questions will be provided to OCDC. Data should be in compliance with USAID data regulations and international quality standards. All data will be published on USAID's data database at the completion of this project.
 - b. Task 2: Qualitative responses from key informant interviews and focus groups will be reviewed and transcribed by the Offeror. The extent of the translated excerpts will be determined based on the preliminary results and presented to OCDC in a single combined document. OCDC and Offeror will collaborative create a framework, informed by the quantitative results, for coding and analysis of qualitative data.
- 8. Approach to Analyze results.
 - a. Task 1: Preliminary quantitative analysis and report. OCDC expects the analysis to include:
 - 1. Descriptive statistics
 - 2. Response frequencies for all survey questions
 - 3. Preliminary statistical results showing economic and social impact of cooperatives
 - ii. OCDC will review and discuss the preliminary results with the Offeror thus determining any additional statistical analysis to be completed.
 - iii. Final analysis
 - iv. Final report on quantitative results: The final analysis will be presented in the final report along with the successes and challenges including any proposed changes to instruments or methodology.
 - b. Task 2: The Offeror will offer a brief synopsis of qualitative findings.
 - i. Preliminary quantitative analysis
 - 1. Descriptive statistics
 - 2. Brief synopsis of qualitative findings
 - 3. Primary themes and trends
 - ii. OCDC will review and discuss the preliminary results with the Offeror thus determining any additional analysis to be completed.
 - iii. Final analysis

- iv. Final report on qualitative results: The final analysis will be presented in the final report along with the successes and challenges including any proposed changes to instruments or methodology.
